ETEON and CyberSecura enter into a strategic partnership to promote the creation of secure application architectures by design.

The two digital companies specialising respectively in digital development and cybersecurity are pooling their expertise to optimise the reliability, durability and regulatory compliance of the applications produced.

GRENOBLE, 26 October 2020 - CyberSecura, a Grenoble-based company specialised in innovative cybersecurity consulting and services, and ETEON, a company specialised in information systems architecture and software development, have entered into a strategic collaboration agreement, enabling their customers to benefit from an unprecedented level of quality, durability and added value provided by their respective expertise.

ETEON and CyberSecura experts will work on joint projects for the design and implementation of software architectures and coding, fully implementing the cybersecurity by design paradigm. This practice, recommended in different digital frameworks, is mandatory according to the General Data Protection Regulation since May 2018.

The managers of the two companies had for several weeks been discussing possible synergies between ETEON and CyberSecura. The strong alignment of the spirit of their companies and ethical values facilitated the realisation of this partnership.
These values will be reinforced by the synergies resulting from this partnership: uncompromising professionalism and quality, the centrality of listening to customer needs, agility, collaboration with the local ecosystem, employee development, as well as gender diversity and quality of life at work.

According to Willy Bouthemy, founder and CEO of ETEON: "This partnership will allow us to complete our digital support offer with the cyber security aspect. It transcribes the symbiosis between software architecture and cybersecurity by design, based on a global approach and which, from the design step, are both an objective and a philosophy".

"We are very enthusiastic about the opportunities that this partnership opens up to apply CyberSecurity by Design - the foundation of the CyberSecura brand - in collaboration with a specialist in complex application projects, ETEON, a young and ambitious company," says Saghar Estehghari, co-founder and CEO of CyberSecura and an expert in cybersecurity.
